Police busy on bloody Sunday

CRIME Two men were rushed to hospital after someone fired a gun near the Bank Ultra Lounge near 108 Street and Jasper Avenue sometime around 1 a.m. yesterday.

One of the victims is in critical condition, city cops said.

Police said a fight broke out between two groups of people somewhere in or outside of the nightclub before a number of gunshots were fired.

Two men were arrested and are currently in custody, police said.

Meanwhile, police are also investigating a stabbing that happened near 106 Avenue and 104 Street sometime around 10 a.m. yesterday.

Police said a man was walking around in the area with bloody feet and, after he was questioned by officers, it was discovered that he had been stabbed.

Investigators believe the man was stabbed in a nearby apartment and has hasn't co-operated with police.

The investigation into the case continues.

FOOTBALL Several hundred Eskimo fans took advantage of the nice weather yesterday to spend time with their favourite football team, accepting the club's invitation for the 2010 Eskimo Fan Day.

Fans were able to see the team kick off the 2010 training camp at Clarke Stadium while enjoying free food, games and entertainment.

After their back-to-back practice, the entire team was available to fans for autographs and pictures.

"It's a really good chance for fans to meet our players and get to see the new team for 2010," said Dave Jamieson, Eskimo's director of communications.

"People get a chance to see what we're all about and take in a professional football practice. Even if you don't know who the players are and don't follow as closely, it's a good atmosphere here."

One of the highlights of the fan appreciation day was the 13th Eskimo sign. The banner, which will be placed below the 13th Eskimo flag at Commonwealth Stadium was set up for fans to sign and eternalize love for the team.

The Eskimos will start off this year's exhibition season on June 13, playing against Calgary at Commonwealth Stadium.

Man dead after random attack

JEFF CUMMINGS

Police are looking for a notorious group of "thugs" who are allegedly responsible for fatally stabbing a 38-year-old man from Thailand early yesterday morning.

"It appears that this was a random attack," said Edmonton police homicide detective Bill Clark. "We are a big city and we have some big-city problems here, but this is a bunch of thugs walking the neighbourhood. And in order to put an end to these thugs, we need the public's help."

Two of the victim's friends were walking home near 99 Street and 82 Avenue when they were violently attacked by a group of "four to six white males" sometime around 1 a.m., said Clark.

Police said the melee continued in front of a house east of 99 Street and 80 Avenue where it appears three of the men were continuing to rob the pair.

The victim and another friend ran out of the house to help, police said, and that's when the victim was stabbed. Police said the suspects then ran off in a northwestern direction.

The victim was rushed to hospital where he later died.

"We know that somebody knows these people," said Clark about the suspects. "There is a chance that these individuals are involved in this type of activity in this area in the past. We would like to speak to anyone that may have had this type of incident, or been accosted by these group of individuals before ... They are like a pack of wild dogs."

Clark said the victim and his friends involved in the attack were all "hard-working innocent victims" who don't speak English.

Police are looking for three white males. One is described as a chubby 20-year-old with short dark hair who stands between five-foot-seven and five-foot-10.

The second suspect is described as a skinny 18- to 20-year-old with short dark hair who was wearing baggy black shorts to his knees with pockets on the sides. Police believe he is armed with a knife.

The third suspect, the tallest of the group, is described as an 18- to 20-year-old who was seen wearing a black leather coat.

Police are asking anyone with information to call the service's dispatch line at 780-423-4567.

Veterans remember air crash victims

A low-flying C-130 Hercules soared over roughly 150 veterans, military members and their families yesterday at a park in the Edmonton Garrison where 10 airmen lost their lives in a tragic mid-air crash 25 years ago.

The flyby was part of a service to mark the anniversary of the fatal crash that involved two Hercules planes — the only dual Hercules mid-air crash in Canada's history.

Nine people from 435 Squadron, and an American pilot on an exchange from the United States Air Force, died in the crash on March 29, 1985, as three Hercules planes flew in formation during a service for the Royal Canadian Air Force's 61st anniversary.

Two planes, Trucker Lead and Trucker Two, were preparing to land on the runway when they collided, leaving debris scattered across the area.

The third plane took flight again yesterday, thundering past the small crowd after a bugler played the Last Post.

"Every mention of search and rescue on the TV or in the newspapers takes you back," said retired pilot Austin Ingram, who flew with some of the airmen killed in the crash. "It's like seeing ghosts from my past."

Squadron commanding officer Lt.-Col. Richard Pamplin said the crash was a tragic event for the squad's members. "It is still, that day, part of our history," said Pamplin. "It is important that we remember."

Celebration of art grows to accommodate demand

MIRIAM ITZECK

Spending the day in the park turned out to be especially colourful and entertaining for several thousands of Edmontonians who came together for the 7th Heart of the City Festival this weekend.

The free-admission event, held in Little Italy's Giovanni Caboto Park, offered lots of family-friendly activities like face painting and free art workshops.

Local emerging and professional artists like Painting with Ella and Jeff Morris were sharing the stage to provide non-stop entertainment.

Candice McColl attended the festival with her six-year-old son Seth on both days.

"We just popped over and he loved it. We were here for four hours yesterday and he wanted to come back," McColl said.

Even though she lives close to the park, this was the first time she had heard about the event.

"It's great to see a lot of people out here in this area," she said. "The park has had a lot of drug use and drinking, so it's nice to see that families are back here."

For the first time, the festival, financed through sponsorships and countless volunteer hours, spanned two days this year. Fifty-six acts and 146 musicians were on stage this time around.

Last year there were nine hours of music; this year that number doubled.

"Every year it's a bit bigger. There's more attendance, more energy around it," said Katrina Bray, chair of the festival. "We found that we were really overwhelmed by interest. Our mandate is to support the artists of the downtown core, and we found that we didn't have enough stage time for them all."

Doubling the size of the festival was a challenge for the organizing committee, she said. But one that was surmountable.

"Two years ago we were too green to run a two-day event," Bray said. "We weren't ready for it any earlier, we sort of grow with the festival."

Do loose lips sink Tory ships?

Part 1 in a three-part series on the government's efforts to exert control over its message

Bottled Messages Special Report

An MP's Sunday afternoon visit to a seniors' home. The federal purchase of powerful new military aircraft. A journalist's innocuous query about Africa.

One thing connects them all — the Conservative government scripted each event using a potent but little-known communication tool called the Message Event Proposal.

The Canadian Press has obtained almost 1,000 pages of MEPs from several government departments, including the Privy Council Office, under the Access to Information Act. The PCO, the bureaucratic nerve centre of Ottawa, has been conscripted by an increasingly powerful Prime Minister's Office to vet requests for public events across the federal government.

The MEPs have blurred the time-honoured separation of non-partisan public servants and political staffers and sidelined seasoned government communicators, sapping morale across the civil service.

They've become the political tool for literally putting words in the mouths of cabinet ministers, federal bureaucrats, low-profile MPs on the barbecue circuit, and seasoned diplomats abroad.

"Your authorization is sought for President

What goes into an MEP

• An MEP template typically includes the following subtitles: Event, event type, desired headline, key messages, media lines, strategic objectives, desired soundbite, ideal speaking backdrop, ideal event photograph, tone, attire, rollout materials, background and strategic considerations.

Greenhill to respond to questions ... during the press conference," reads one MEP prepared by the Canadian International Development Agency asking the PCO to allow its then-president, Robert Greenhill, to speak at a high-level United Nations panel.

The MEP is the crucial communication instrument for a minority government that values staying on message above all else — a transformation that federal officials and public-policy analysts say is undermining democracy. While all governments try to control the message, the ambitious sweep of MEPs is unprecedented in federal politics.

Critics say it contradicts the core campaign promise that brought Prime Minister Stephen Harper to power — introducing a new era of government transparency and accountability.

"We discussed every single issue and micromanaged every news release — everything," said one former Harper-era PCO official. "Pretty much any event, or any rollout of an announcement, would have an MEP that would lay out the strategy."

A review of hundreds of MEPs spanning several years reveals the vast sweep of control exerted by the Harper government.

They have been used to orchestrate almost everything from the rollout of billion-dollar purchases of military aircraft to the donation of a few thousand dollars to a community group.

The identities of senior sources who have worked at PCO and other departments are not being revealed because they fear retribution from their political masters.

The Prime Minister's Office declined to comment on this story.

Cap may work, but oil spill drags on

As the White House struggles to regain the American public's trust as oil continues to gush from a BP well at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, the oil giant said its containment cap — its latest effort to plug the leak — was beginning to capture greater amounts of crude.

BP said it has increased the amount of oil being collected from its oozing well to 10,500 barrels a day and expects the quantity to increase in the days to come, a rare bit of promising news in the midst of the worst oil spill in U.S. history. The containment cap is capturing "probably the vast majority" of the making the rounds of the Sunday talk shows, said on CNN. "I don't think anyone should be pleased as long as there's oil in the water."

Allen said the gushing oil is just one of several fronts in a battle in the gulf that will stretch on for months. "This is a war, he said.

Brian Gould

normally use this space to critique other people's plans and actions, meaning I come across as more negative than I would like. Unfortunately, with no direct power to influence most processes, this is my role as a columnist.

With my departure from this space approaching, however, I want to try something a little different: Pretend that I have the power to make certain design decisions and hope that others will have similar ideas.

While the countless LRT planning projects underway would be good subjects, the City Centre Airport redevelopment project provides an enticing blank slate and the design competition is just beginning.

So, where to start? Being that this is a transit column, I should start with the obvious — building on the plans to extend LRT to St. Albert from NAIT with a fully transit-oriented development.

Current LRT plans place only one station on the site, but I'd place at least two to shorten the walks closer to the city's 400-metre policy.

The stations themselves should be surrounded with the densest and most vibrant uses, tapering off into the quiet fringes, to allow residents to trade off access and privacy while ensuring that most people live within a short walk of the stations.

Because this line will be the old-style high-floor train, it's important to ensure that the track isn't a barrier. Building on an open site means that cut-and-cover tunnelling is relatively easy, and shallow tunnels running under a linear park would reduce the cost.

A side benefit is that instead of the usual climb to the surface, riders would only need to mount a single flight of stairs to return topside with platforms located under plazas rather than streets. Along with high-floor

LRT running north-south, I've long thought that 118 Avenue would be a good future candidate for urban cross-town LRT. At the very least, it's currently an important transit corridor that deserves strengthening, and with the airport gone it should be connected through the site in some form.

Redirecting a few major bus routes (the 8, 9, 12, and some reorganization of the 3 and 5 come to mind) and supplying a few community circulators for those with limited mobility would round out the rest of the necessary transit service.

The question then is: How to ensure that new residents and visitors take transit — as well as walk and bicycle — which is a question I'll address in a future column.

Brian Gould is a transportation planner and has served in a variety of roles with the Transit Riders' Union of Edmonton.

Pot club raids help organized crime: Senator

Police have done the Mob and street gangs a favour by cracking down on cannabis clubs, say pot decriminalization advocates.

They warn people will now be buying their stuff from criminal networks instead of tax-paying businesses.

Thirty-five people were arrested in raids on Quebec's so-called "compassion clubs" — storefront outlets operating in plain view — while 90 kilograms of cannabis were also seized Thursday.

Those clubs in Montreal and Quebec City offered a wide selection of marijuana for about $10 per gram to customers who claimed a medical condition and provided a doctor's note.

Police argue the clubs were selling to healthy people and essentially were drug-trafficking operations. A police spokesman said those arrested were all released after promising to appear in court June 23.

Senator Pierre Claude Nolin says users of medicinal marijuana are now forced to find it elsewhere, and the vast majority will wind up getting it from criminal gangs.

After making the arrests, police themselves declared the clubs had no connection to criminal gangs.

"It's the most disastrous consequence of the whole operation," said Nolin, a longtime advocate for relaxed drug laws.

"The vast majority will have to look at the black market ... and the substance on the black market is not exactly the quality substance that are received in the clubs.

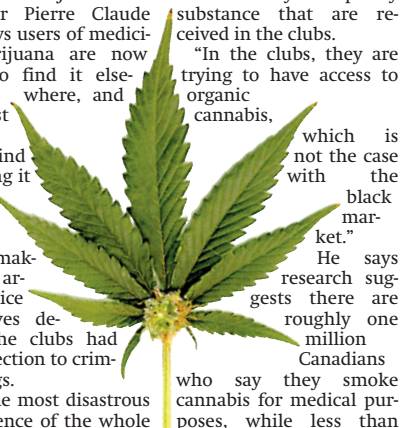

"In the clubs, they are trying to have access to organic cannabis, which is not the case with the black market."

He says research suggests there are roughly one million Canadians who say they smoke cannabis for medical purposes, while less than 5,000 such permits have been issued by Health Canada.

Board's green cred panned

N.L. oil well regulators lack environmental expertise: Scientist

A biologist and researcher is asking why none of the six men on the board regulating oil activity off Newfoundland lists environmental expertise as a prime credential.

The head of the Canada-Newfoundland and Labrador Offshore Petroleum Board has stressed that environmental protection is a top goal.

But Gail Fraser of York University points out that the board members' on-line biographies cite little or no related background.

"They don't have anybody on the board with environmental expertise that has voting capacity," she said from Toronto. "They're supposed to be regulating the environment."

One of the six board members describes earning an unspecified science degree before joining the Newfoundland public service in 1969.

"None of them would know a good research design if it hit them in the head," said Fraser, who is studying federal offshore regulations.

The joint federal-provincial body was formed in 1986 to oversee offshore activity at arm's length from government. Its four-pronged mandate includes safety, environmental protection, resource management and industrial benefits.

The board regulates licences for exploration and production in an area that sprawls over 7.4 million hectares.

It has fallen under intense scrutiny as deepsea drilling continues about 400 kilometres northeast of St. John's, N.L., despite a massive blowout in the Gulf of Mexico.

Canada's Coast Guard to lend boom for Gulf cleanup

GULF The Canadian Coast Guard is sending half of its ocean boom to the Gulf of Mexico to help U.S. authorities deal with the oil cleanup effort.

Over 3,000 metres of the floating containment system will be trucked over the next few days to Mobile, Ala., for deployment, Gail Shea, the minister responsible for the coast guard, announced yesterday.

"We have offered assistance to the United States and we got the official request on Friday," Shea said following a media briefing.

"I would expect they will take all they can get, even though they have a lot of boom there now."

Shea said Ottawa will do what it can to maximize its contribution to cleanup efforts. Canada has already sent scientists from the Centre for Offshore Oil and Gas Environmental Research to monitor the effects of oil dispersants, as well as a plane to track the course of the slicks.

Kenneth Lee, an oil spill remediation expert with the centre, has just returned from the Gulf coast, where he was helping monitor the spread of the oil. "There's a lot of activity down there and I don't think people realize how hard the effort is to try and stop this spill," he said.

Cleaner, greener future for truckers

Emission standards driving new generation of truckers to be cleanest ever on Canadian roads

Trucking changes

• The oilsands project can be treacherous for truck drivers. Rough terrain and tricky weather can easily place rig operators in challenging and unfamiliar circumstances. In 2002, to address this, some of the biggest oil-exploration companies — Albion Sands Energy, Suncor Energy and Syncrude Canada — invested $350,000 in a special truck simulator to prepare drivers for these difficult conditions.

• The Alberta government announced last week it is offering up to $30,000 in rebates for truck owners and small-to-midsize operators adopting fuel-efficient technologies. The $2-million program assists with the acquisition of aerodynamic aids, devices that reduce idling time, and specially designed hybrid trucks — all designed to reduce greenhouse gas emissions in the province's transportation industry.

BEN KNIGHT/

Many Canadians see transport trucks as a necessary evil. Necessary, because just about any product you buy anywhere likely spent part of its journey to market on a truck.

Evil, because of the noise, highway congestion, dust, vehicle size, pollution

Well, maybe not pollution. Changes in emission standards in both Canada and the United States, coupled with innovative new technologies, have made the latest generation of big rigs — by far — the cleanest ever seen on our highways.

"Smog emission has been completely and successfully dealt with," says Paul R. Landry, president and CEO of the British Columbia Trucking Association.

"If you were to look at a new truck back in '98 or '99, you'd see smoke coming out of the stack. Every time the gas pedal went down, there'd be this puff of absolutely black smoke."

Today's trucks are extremely clean. You could go into Los Angeles with a 2010 truck, and it would take dirty air, clean it, and put it right back in circulation."

That covers just about all dirty emissions — particulates, carbon monoxide — that haze up cities and irritate people's the contradiction we've been faced with is that, until 2010, the technology that focused on reduced smog emissions has caused us to actually consume more fuel," Landry concedes.

"When we put on those particulate traps in 2007, it added weight to the truck, and caused an increase in energy consumption."

The answer? Greater fuel efficiency. And there are many ways to achieve that.

"There are technologies that can be deployed in terms of aerodynamics and anti-idling devices," Landry notes.

"Similarly, a well-trained driver can reduce your fuel consumption by 10 to 15 per cent."

"We can use GPS to ensure we've got our routing right, and keep our trucks as full as possible to reduce the number of trucks that need to be on the road. All of those things are happening."

All of this costs money,

Today's trucks are using GPS along with other technologies to help curb dirty emissions.

of course. And even though fuel savings cover most upgrade costs in under two years, Landry says his industry could really use some outside help.

"We'd like to have a greater partnership with government in terms of providing access to that capital," he concludes.

"When you have to spend that extra $20,000 to $30,000 on a tractor for aerodynamics or an anti-idling device,

"If you were to look at a new truck back in '98 or '99, you'd see smoke coming out of the stack. Every time the gas pedal went down, there'd be this puff of absolutely black smoke."

Dave Bolland (36) of the Chicago Blackhawks celebrates with his teammates after scoring a goal against the Philadelphia Flyers in Game 5 of the Stanley Cup final in Chicago yesterday.

Hawks one win away

(Chicago leads series 3-2)

Flyers 4 Blackhawks 7

Dustin Byfuglien scored two goals and had two assists as the Chicago Blackhawks got off to a quick start and beat the Philadelphia Flyers 7-4 last night for a 3-2 lead in the Stanley Cup final.

Brent Seabrook added a power-play goal and Dave Bolland, Kris Versteeg, Patrick Kane and Patrick Sharp also scored for the Blackhawks.

Chicago can capture the Stanley Cup for the first time since 1961 with a victory Wednesday night in Philadelphia in Game 6. A Flyers win would send the series back to Chicago for a decisive Game 7 on Friday night.

All five wins in the series have come on home ice.

Scott Hartnell, Kimmo Timonen, James van Riemsdyk and Simon Gagne scored for the Flyers. Gagne's goal with 2:36 left made it 6-4, but a half-minute later Byfuglien converted an empty-netter.

After two straight losses in Philadelphia, a return to the United Center invigorated the Blackhawks as did some line mixing by coach Joel Quenneville.

The Blackhawks blitzed Flyers goalie Michael Leighton with three goals in the final 7:43 of the first period, sending the crowd into a frenzy.

Jennifer Schultz went from burping babies to burping Tupperware. This was not her plan. The native of Kitchener, Ont., studied early childhood education and taught in Montessori school.

After getting married and having two kids and settling in nearby Waterloo, Schultz decided she wanted to be a stay-at-home mom. When her youngest was three years old, in 2005, she went to a Tupperware party at a friend's house, she even agreed to hold her own.

Her first party raked in Through Tupperware comes a dream vacation? When Jennifer Schultz, pictured, first became a Tupperware salesperson, she did not expect that it would eventually lead to a trip to Argentina.

$1,000 — a success — but when salesperson offered her a kit to run her own parties, she only halfheartedly agreed:

"I was a bit embarrassed at first. It wasn't cool. I'd done things in my life. Me, a Tupperware lady?"

She began hosting parties

a few nights a week. The time demand was minimal and the products sold themselves: Along with plastic containers, the company offered knives, kitchen linens, teas and pots and pans. But she often lost heart and wondered how anyone ever made real

About 10 months later, and after almost giving up a few times, she realized that she could be a lot more successful if she didn't just focus on selling Tupperware, but tried as well to recruit new salespeople.

Schultz's sales force grew and soon she began getting rewards from the company — including trips to Disney World and Argentina, as well as a new convertible.

She now has 60 sales representatives who pay her a portion of their sales. Some she recruited from parties, others through her website, many of whom live far enough away that she's never met them.

For those who do live nearby, she holds regular meetings to offer selling tips. Schultz also regularly meets and talks with other Tupperware salespeople to keep her own skills sharp.

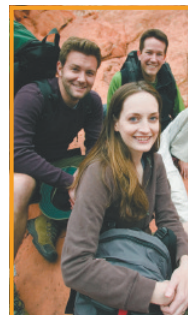

Her workday begins at 9:30 a.m., when her kids are at school. At least three nights a week she's out to run parties or attend meetings. It adds up to about 20 hours a week, which suite her and her kids just fine: "Every time I do something on the weekend, it bothers me."

Jewel still shines

Success allows singer to call the shots

NICK KREWEN
for Metro Canada

Sweet and Wild, out tomorrow, might be Jewel's latest album released under the country music banner, but don't expect the 36-year-old singer and songwriter to stylistically pigeonhole herself.

All you need to do is look at her nine-album catalogue to truly appreciate her diversity: there's the folkish-pop sound of her 1995 12-million selling debut Pieces Of You; the dance-rhythm orientation of 2003's 0304; and last year's intimately stark, acoustic Lullaby.

"I see it all as the same," Kilcher told Metro Saturday from Florence, Ind., where she's part-way through a tour that won't hit Canada until 2011.

"To me it seems so natural: If you go into your closet, you might own sweatpants and a business suit and golfing clothes — but they all belong to the same person. "It's a three-dimensional reflection of me. I'm p-y, acerbic and sarcastic, but I'm also very earnest, sincere and poetic."

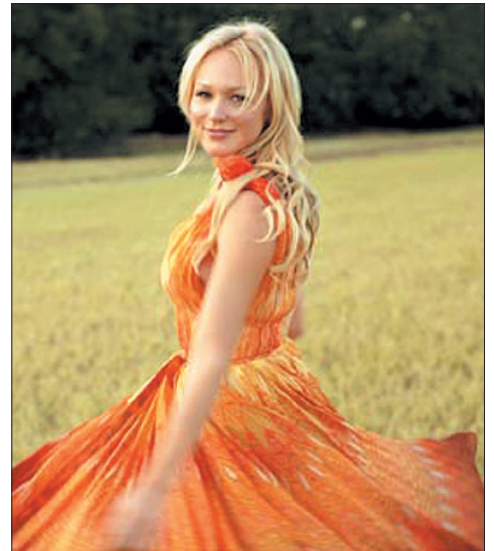

And make no mistake:

it's Jewel who calls the shots, ever since the mind-boggling success of Pieces Of You — propelled by the Top 10 hits Foolish Games, Who Will Save Your Soul and You Were Meant For Me — made her financially comfortable for life.

"My first album really gave me freedom because it made me so much money that I never really had to have a hit again," she explains. "And so, instead of feeling all this pressure — like how am I going to follow this up and have bigger hits — it took pressure off me."

"I felt like I can just have fun for the rest of my life," she laughs. "As long as I'm smart with my money."

So Jewel has a simpler objective these days. "My goals in life are to hopefully have longevity and continue to focus on the craft and get better at writing."

Sweet and Wild is the new album from Jewel.

For Sweet and Wild, Jewel took a different tact: she invited some of Nashville's top songwriters to write at the Texas ranch she shares with her rodeo champion husband, Ty Murray.

"Stay Here Forever (her current single) and What You Are are two songs I got from those sessions," she says.

Jewel says the 11 songs on Sweet and Wild "showcase both sides of my personality."

"I like to read poetry and sit under trees, but I also ride my motorcycle, shoot guns and smoke a cigar if there's a good one around."

Man convicted in Dunst robbery

HANDBAG HEIST ENDS WITH JUSTICE FOR SPIDEY'S LEADING LADY It was a real-life remake, with a different ending.

A mechanic was convicted Friday of burglary in the theft of Kirsten Dunst's $2,000 designer purse and actor Simon Pegg's cellphone and other items from a chic hotel, a 2007 heist that forced the co-stars to twice play the part of witnesses.

James Jimenez, who said he just tagged along on what he thought was a co-defendant's legiti-mate errand, was convicted of trespassing after a trial last fall. But that jury deadlocked on the more serious burglary charge, spurring a retrial that brought the actors back to the witness stand this week. Their roles were simple: They explained that their possessions disappeared from a SoHo Grand Hotel penthouse suite they were using as a lounge during filming for How to Lose Friends & Alienate People, and that they didn't know the men they later saw ambling around the penthouse floor on surveillance video.

The star witnesses added a dash of Hollywood to the Manhattan trials and gave jurors a behind-the-scenes look at moviemaking.

Dunst, best known for her roles in the Spider-Man series, and Pegg, whose credits include last year's Star Trek movie, described details ranging from the duties of a third assistant director to their takeout dinner from the high-end sushi restaurant Nobu. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pratt & Montag: Love is not all they need

NOT ANOTHER REALITY SHOW ABOUT SUPERFICIALITY! It looks like the real reason Spencer Pratt and Heidi Montag separated last week was because the couple had simply run out of money, sources tell Radar Online.

"They were definitely in the hole at the end of last season. Their business manager was calling the house every day. They were tripping over their funds," a source tells the website. Pratt's spending is reportedly out of control, with he himself admitting he's spent as much as $500,000 on spiritual crystals this year.

Montag is reportedly shopping a new reality series that focuses on her life separated from Pratt.

Regretting her words

FISHING FOR SYMPATHY WITH INSENSITIVITY... PROBABLY NOT WISE Kristen Stewart is feeling remorse over her choice of words in comparing being followed by paparazzi to being raped. "I really made an enormous mistake," tells People magazine.

"I'm really sorry about my choice of words. I've made stupid remarks before, and I've always reasoned, 'Whatever. They can think what they want.'"

Metro Recipe of the Day

Russian Borscht

INGREDIENTS:

6 medium-size beets with tops
2 cups finely-shredded spinach
2 tbsp butter
1 large onion, chopped
5 cups low-sodium beef broth
540 ml can chopped tomatoes, undrained and cut up
2 tsp dried marjoram
1 tsp salt
1 tsp dried dill weed
1/2 tsp black pepper
2 cups shredded cabbage
2 cups bite-size pieces cooked beef or pork
2 tbsp vinegar
1 tbsp sugar

METHOD:

1. Trim leaves from beets, leaving 2.5 cm of stem attached. In 6-litre Dutch oven, cover beets with lightly salted water. Bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, covered, 45 minutes or until tender; drain. Cool slightly. Peel beets by slipping off skins while still warm. Cut beets into 3.5 cm x 0.5 cm sticks. Measure 4 cups.

2. In same pot, melt butter over moderately high heat. Add onion and cook 5 minutes or until tender.

3. Add spinach broth, tomatoes, marjoram, salt, dill weed and pepper. Bring to boil. Lower heat and simmer, covered, 5 to 10 minutes or until spinach is tender. Stir in cabbage, beef, vinegar and sugar. Carefully stir in cooked beef or pork. Simmer, covered, 5 to 7 minutes more or until heated through.

ARIES
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
Just because something is fashionable does not mean you have to believe in it or follow it slavishly. Question everything you are told today.

TAURUS
APRIL 21-MAY 21
It is important to know why friends and colleagues think and act in certain ways. Pay attention.

GEMINI
MAY 22-JUNE 21
You know that something drastic needs to be done and it is around the middle part of the week that good intentions will easily be translated into action.

CANCER
JUNE 22-JULY 22
There are only so many hours in a day and so many days in a week, so use your time wisely and make the most of your talents.

LEO
JULY 23-AUG 23
Keep things simple today, especially when dealing with financial matters. Also, don't be afraid to speak the truth as you see it.

VIRGO
AUG 24-SEPT 22
The direct approach is the best approach today, and that applies as much to your job or career as it does to affairs of the heart.

LIBRA
SEPT 23-OCT 23
What you fear the most is what you most likely have least to fear. Does that knowledge make you feel any better? If not, don't worry about it.

SCORPIO
OCT 24-NOV 22
You will be thinking deeply about your place in the world this week, and that's good. But don't go so deep that you lose sight of the sky.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV 23-DEC 21
Someone in a position of authority is about to make you a remarkably good offer. Is it too good to be true? Make it your business to find out.

CAPRICORN
DEC 22-JAN 20
You've had more than your share of false starts lately and it may not be until next month that you feel you are back in control of your life.

AQUARIUS
JAN 21-FEB 18
If you rely on what others say today you may regret it later on, especially if what they say goes against your own instincts.

PISCES
FEB 19-MARCH 20
You can talk yourself in to or out of any situation right now, but that is not an excuse to go looking for trouble.
